Hearst Asks Why Archbold Was Allowed to Go

LONDON, Aug. 30.—The people of the United States should ask their representatives in the United States Senate a few direct and pertinent questions.

Why has no attempt been made by the United States Senate to probe actual and established Standard Oil bribery and corruption? Why was Mr. Archbold allowed to ignore the instance of proven Standard Oil bribery, and to make unsupported allegations that had little or nothing to do with actual corruption?

Why was not Mr. Archbold properly cross-examined on his testimony, and when he should have been held, not only as the main witness, but as the chief corruptor?

Why was not Mr. Archbold asked to produce documents to establish the truth of his testimony, where the Senate knows perfectly well that documents are not lacking to establish whatever is true in this Standard Oil conspiracy?

Why was Mr. Archbold allowed to leave the country when he had given only immaterial, inconsistent and largely unsatisfactory testimony, and when he should have been held, not only as the main witness, but as the chief corruptor?

Why were not Senator Penrose and other culpable United States Senators investigated as to their actual guilt in this so-called Standard Oil investigation by the Senate?

Why was Senator Penrose not asked to produce some proof in his defense, when the accusations against him were based upon documentary evidence and absolute legal proof?

Why were the empty assertions of Senator Penrose, confessed corruptionist, accepted without question and no opportunity given the victims of Senator Penrose's attack to reply to his assertions?

I am not a partisan of Mr. Roosevelt. As a matter of fact, I have neither confidence in nor admiration for Mr. Roosevelt.

When I was battling in 1906 for exactly the same principles which Mr. Roosevelt has at last appropriated as his party program, Mr. Roosevelt sent Mr. Root, Tweed's agent and his, into the New York State fight to attack me and compass the defeat of the principles for which I stood.

Mr. Roosevelt has since denounced Mr. Root as a corruptionist, which he is and was then. Mr. Roosevelt has since pronounced my program right, which it is and was then. But Mr. Roosevelt did not feel that Mr. Root was a corruptionist until Mr. Root had opposed him, and Mr. Roosevelt did not realize that the Progressive program was right until he saw where he could benefit by the popular sentiment which had been aroused in its support.

When I and my publications were sustaining the assaults of privileged interests for interfering with their control of people's government, we had to sustain also the assaults of Mr. Root and Mr. Roosevelt.

When I and my publications were denounced as yellow by a chorus of corrupt politicians and criminal corporations, that chorus was swelled by the mellow voices of Mr. Root and Mr. Roosevelt attuned to harmonious accord.

But now that the principles we advocated and the reforms that we urged have become generally approved and accepted. Mr. Roosevelt, who was their main opponent, poses pharisaically as their chief champion.

I am not, therefore, unduly prejudiced in Mr. Roosevelt's favor, but the truth in this Standard Oil conspiracy is not a question of favor, but a question of fact.

I am not engaged in defending Mr. Roosevelt personally, and I shall later print letters which will not particularly please Mr. Roosevelt, but I am engaged in giving the American people the exact facts in regard to the political corruption with which they are oppressed.

If Senator Penrose stated that the $25,000 sent him by Mr. Archbold was for Mr. Roosevelt and not for himself, he stated what was not true. I have waited several days for Senator Penrose to tell the truth, but he is apparently unwilling to do so, and I am going to tell the truth for him, as I promised to do.

The $25,000 sent Senator Penrose in a secret certificate of deposit by Mr. Archbold was for Senator Penrose's own use in his personal Pennsylvania campaign.

Senator Penrose acknowledged receipt of the $25,000 certificate of deposit, and referred specifically to Mr. Archbold's letter of October 13, in which the certificate was enclosed. Furthermore, Senator Penrose signed the acknowledgment as chairman of the Pennsylvania State Committee, and wrote in doing so upon the official stationery of the Pennsylvania State Committee.

Other Standard Oil contributions were solicited and employed by other committees in the campaign of 1904, but this particular certificate of deposit was secured by Senator Penrose for his own use in his own State, and I have the documents to prove this.

If Senator Penrose should tell any further falsehoods I shall be glad to disprove them, but "sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof."

Mr. Wood gave out this statement, reading it from a typewritten copy to the newspaper reporters:

I confess I am greatly surprised by the action of the Grand Jury. I cannot conceive what information could have been presented to the jurors.

which in any way connected me with the so-called dynamite plot.

I certainly had no connection with it and this fact will be fully established at the proper time to the full satisfaction of the public and even the District Attorney.

Beyond this I have nothing to say.

President Wood Cheerful.

President Wood apparently was in a cheerful humor. He smiled and chatted with the anti-congressmen Powers. Wood was a light check suit. He had on a straw hat. He rode up to police headquarters in his automobile. In the automobile, besides anti-congressmen Powers, were Police Inspector Lynch, who served the warrant on Wood, Mr. Wood's son and others.

At police headquarters Wood was looked like the very best of men. The charge placed against him was "conspiracy to place explosives, to wit, dynamite, in the streets of Lawrence, etc."

Wood came out from the Bureau of Criminal Investigation, at Police Headquarters, and down the short flight of steps into South Street at 9:55.

The moment the party appeared on the steps a battery of newspaper photographers began "snapping" Wood. They expected Wood to shut the cameras.

But Wood merely glanced and said to the photographers:

"All right."

One of the camera men cried: "Wood, is the arm and said: 'Please a minute.'"

Wood, smiling broadly, held up his right hand, and the camera men began to "snap" him. After the cameras clicked, Wood said: "Everybody happy now?" and started along with the others.

Bail is Produced.

Wood, accompanied by his counsel and friends, went to the District Attorney's office. There they had a talk with Assistant District Attorney Frank J. McLaughlin. It was decided to let him bail at $50,000.

"Can you accept the bail bond?" Mr. McLaughlin asked.

"No," he was told, "we will have to have a bail guarantor."

"Who's Billy Dyer?" one of the men in the crowd asked. Wood's son, who was in the crowd, answered: "He's a newspaper man. He's a friend of mine. He's a friend of mine. He's a friend of mine."

Wood was eager to get out of the office as soon as possible. He was in the crowd, and he was in the crowd. He was in the crowd, and he was in the crowd.

Wood was eager to get out of the office as soon as possible. He was in the crowd, and he was in the crowd. He was in the crowd, and he was in the crowd.

At 10:15 Wood, his son and the lawyers left the office of Clerk Manahan after bail had been given. Inspector Lynch returned to headquarters.

Wood and his party went out to Fenimore square, entered the automobile and were started away.

Mr. Powers said he did not want a copy of the indictment and would not know the exact charge until the time of arraignment. Mr. Powers planned to see the District Attorney to talk over the proceedings.

Wood learned of the indictment when he was in New York. He left Boston Tuesday to meet his son, who was returning from London. The statement was made, but it was the first he had heard of the indictment.

As soon as Mr. Powers learned Wood was indicted he hurried to New York. Wood, his son and Powers came back to Boston as the express that left at 11 o'clock. They arrived late last evening. Powers immediately notified the District Attorney's office that Wood would surrender almost immediately. They went to see him to be taken to Boston today to meet with his counsel.

Here is the substance of the indictment against President Wood:

"Conspiracy to place explosives, to wit, dynamite, in certain buildings and premises, with the intention of injuring the persons who were found with the explosives in their possession with the intention of injuring certain of the mill owners and their property."

Second, that the three defendants are charged with conspiring with Green and Pitman to place the dynamite in the premises of Lawrence people with the intention of injuring the persons who were found with the explosives in their possession unlawfully.

Third, that Wood, Collins and a third man are charged with conspiring "unlawfully and maliciously" with Green and Pitman to injure Joseph Assaf by placing seven pounds of dynamite in his house at Lawrence.

Fourth, that Wood, Collins and another are charged with the same offense as specified in the third count, against Urban of the place, of Lawrence. (Seven pounds of dynamite were placed in his house.)

WHAT THE DYNAMITE INDICTMENTS CHARGE

The indictment returned by the Grand Jury in the dynamite "plant" at Lawrence contains six counts, which, summarized, are as follows:

First, that William M. Wood, Dennis J. Collins and a third person whose name is not disclosed, on January 20 last, in Boston, conspired with John J. Green and Ernest W. Pitman to place dynamite in the buildings of Joseph Assaf and Urban of Prato and on the premises of Philip Holland at Lawrence with the intention of falsely accusing the strikers of having the explosives in their possession with the intention of injuring certain of the mill owners and their property.

Second, that the three defendants are charged with conspiring with Green and Pitman to place the dynamite in the premises of Lawrence people with the intention of injuring the persons who were found with the explosives in their possession unlawfully.

Third, that Wood, Collins and a third man are charged with conspiring "unlawfully and maliciously" with Green and Pitman to injure Joseph Assaf by placing seven pounds of dynamite in his house at Lawrence.

Fourth, that Wood, Collins and another are charged with the same offense as specified in the third count, against Urban of the place, of Lawrence. (Seven pounds of dynamite were placed in his house.)

Fifth, that Wood, Collins and a third man not named, are charged with conspiring with Pitman and Breen to store dynamite in buildings in Lawrence without a permit.

Sixth, that the same defendants are charged with conspiring with Pitman and Collins to place the dynamite in the county of Essex where it was found with the intent to injure various buildings and their occupants.

me to furnish him with dynamite to blast the buildings.

"At first I refused absolutely to sell any dynamite, but after much urging on his part, consented to loan him a few sticks. I consider myself an expert in handling dynamite. The sticks were from the Worcester plant and I sold them to him in Boston, so he could give him the dynamite. The fact was to take them to Worcester that night and I was to begin in the morning. Pitman suggested that I come to Boston with him, and after he had turned over the sticks in the forenoon we could then talk over business matters."

"No Danger of Exploding."

"I consented, and after wrapping the sticks up, I loaded the rollers for Boston. I assured him that the sticks were in no danger of exploding. At the corner of Washington and Franklin streets, Boston, we met another man and he turned the sticks over to him. He did not introduce me to the man. I thought it was strange in this incident. I knew he was a builder, and had he not been such an intimate friend he would not have given the sticks in the first place."

"The next I heard of Pitman in connection with the dynamite was last Thursday morning at Pitman's apartment, and of his going to the city and of his going to the city and of his going to the city."

"When Pitman came to my house last January evening my wife asked him about the sticks, knowing that he was in the city. He said the sticks were all in the city. He made no mention of the sticks, favoring neither side."

When his father died William was eleven years old. His mother and sisters were practically penniless. It was then that the little boy stood up in their little house on Long street, in the heart of the mill district in New Bedford, and said:

"Father, I'll be the father to the family."

From that time on he has worked and fought his way until he earned a salary said to be $10,000 a year and is at the head of a business upon which 1,000,000 people depend for a living.

There are those in New Bedford who will recall William M. Wood as a boy-remember him when he went to work in the counting room of the Wampanoag mills. They say that William was very comely for his age, even as a little boy.

Felt Pinch of Poverty.

In time days the boy felt the pinch of poverty and hunger. While he worked for a small salary in the mill, it became known to some of the mill boys that he was a boy, and he was a boy, and he was a boy.

The boy slowly could not earn enough to support his family. All those who recall him say that he was conspicuous for his sympathy. He made often of the hard life of those who had to toil in the mills. The little house in which he lived in those days was still standing. It is a story and a half century. From his home his father was buried.

At the City Hall in New Bedford is this record of his father's death:

"William J. Wood, 63-1/2 years, 1848-1912."

Low Fields' Secret: "Constant Good Humor Due to Tuxedo Tobacco."

LEW FIELDS, The Celebrated Comedian

"It's a hard job to be a professional comedian," says Mr. Fields, "but Tuxedo keeps me in happy frame of mind."

"Howdy! Pardon me a moment while I go out and make a change in my head. Lew Fields, the senior member of the famous Weber and Fields partnership, rushed on the stage of the Broadway Theatre, New York, to direct a talking act, and rushing back in a jiffy he offered his visitor to:

"Now when I put on a comedy suit I'm not satisfied at how my temper taxed. Some of the thin ladies aren't funny enough, and some of the fat girls insist on being too 'sensible'—me—whose got to be on the watch all the time. How do I do it? Keep my pipe in my mouth."

continued the producer of the most successful comedies in America, "there is one great recipe for worry-free trouble. That's a pipe of Tuxedo tobacco. I say Tuxedo, for you simply cannot help but fall into a happy frame of mind when you smoke it. It's so absolutely soothing that the world takes on a rosy glimmer. It just puts you right. Tuxedo is smooth, and fragrant, and restful. And when I talk about puffing it, deliciously exhaling it, well, the most difficult comedy really begins to seem funny."

MAYOR DEFENDS NEWPORT NAME

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 29.—Mayor Parker J. Doyle has taken up the campaign against those who venture to detract from the fair name and fame of this leading summer resort.

At the fifteenth annual anniversary dinner of Newport Council, Knights of Columbus, at Newport Beach, he declared that no city in the country the size of Newport has less vice, immorality and corruption than Newport. He denounced the agents leading the writers campaign for progress here as "carpet-baggers."

"One would imagine from reading the stuff of newspaper correspondents, that the conditions here are much worse than they really are."

"I venture the assertion that to other cities anywhere the same size as Newport has less vice, immorality or corruption than this Newport."

"Newport is a city of institutions and also of legends. The numbers of these legends, overlooking their individual facts, are so interwoven with their history that they have to have disbelieving carpet-baggers come here and assume a dominating position to fool the native born, but only when there is a good salary attached."

"This is the first opportunity I have had to enter my protest with the people against those who have a dual code of moral ethics, one for their private and one for their public use."

Operation Cures Tuberculosis of Spine in Children

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Five children afflicted with tuberculosis of the spine, thought doomed to die through life handicapped by their deformity, have been cured by a new surgical operation, performed by Dr. Fred H. Allen, at the Sea View Hospital, Coney Island.

Dr. Allen performed the first operation of its kind at the Sea View Hospital in June, 1911. He removed the diseased bone of the spinal column. Then he took a splinter of healthy bone from the patient's leg—his minimum, in ordinary language. Next the surgeon grafted the healthy living bone on the spinal column in the place of the diseased bone.

The healthy bone knitted and grew into the patient's spine just as a twig, skillfully grafted, grows into a tree. The patient was kept in bed for five or six weeks after the operation. In that time the healthy bone became a part of the spine, formed a new ring and took the place of the soft and fragmentary remains of the vertebrae. The bone was now one with the spine. Thus the patient, permitted to arise, stood upright. Life was not harmed.

MISS RUTH PERKINS, NURSE WHO FOUND LOVE IN HOSPITAL

JUDGE DENIES SPENCER PLEA

The last hope of Bettina Spencer, sentenced to die for the murder of Martha Blackstone in Springfield, with Governor Foss and his council, Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes of the United States Supreme Court has been informally considered, and has refused, the plea of E. P. Stapleton, Spencer's attorney, for a writ of error on constitutional grounds.

Stapleton found Justice Holmes at his summer place at Beverly Farms. It would still be possible to appeal to other judges of the Supreme Court, but Mr. Stapleton declared he felt it would be fruitless.

It is expected a petition will be filed with Governor Foss at once, seeking reconsideration of the sentence. A hearing will be granted, if such an appeal is made, and the date of the hearing will be set for September 11 or September 12.

CHARLOTTE IVES, ACTRESS ENGAGED TO ANTONIO SCOTTI

SCOTTI TO WED CHARLOTTE IVES

Bostonians who have heard Scotti, the great baritone, and who saw Charlotte Ives, whom she met in Boston last February in "As a Man Thinks," were greatly interested today in the called report from London that they had just announced their plans to marry.

Incidentally the report set at rest the many rumors of the past few years that Scotti had been the hand of Giuseppe Pavarotti, with whom he sang at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York. Scotti and Miss Ives have an offer, been reported engaged that the young Metropolitans have been forced to give up the idea of the story. The last time when he sang they were partners on the same tour coming from Europe.

Scotti has been reported engaged to several other young women, but now comes his own announcement, made in London. After he had talked with a reporter, Miss Ives said:

"Quite right, we are going to be married. I am selling the Metropolitan on Saturday and will announce it on my arrival. I must go back to take up my part in 'The House of the Dead.' I gave Mr. Fineman my word that I would, but we are going to be married as soon as we can make arrangements."

NEW EXPLOSIVE KILLS INVENTOR

MILAN, Aug. 29.—Marquis Imperiali, inventor of the new explosive Imperialite, was blown to pieces and his factory was blown into the air at Monte Chiari, near Brescia. Last year he was badly injured by an explosion in the same factory.

He had claimed as one of the chief advantages of his invention that, while it was vastly more destructive than cordite, Imperialite might be handled without danger.

Marquis Imperiali arrived in this country last April 17 to introduce Imperialite. The explosive was tested for the first time in the United States on May 17 at the new Crampton Reservoir, New York. The exhibition was conducted by J. Lane of New York and Mrs. A. E. Marquis of Boston, who were in the opinion of the American people in the invention.

Miss Ruth M. Perkins, recently a student at the Walham Training School for Nurses, is to become the bride of James W. Waters, whose father she attended at Walham Hospital.

Mr. Waters is the son of the late Deputy United States Marshal James W. Waters, who was a patient at Walham Hospital for four months prior to his death last February.

Miss Perkins' care of the elder Mr. Waters and her father was the subject of an article in the Boston Herald. He has taken out an application for a marriage license. This explained to the authorities of the Walham Training School for Nurses why Miss Perkins left there last July, before finishing her course. The date of the wedding is not announced.

Miss Perkins is twenty-one and the daughter of Mrs. Sarah Egleston of No. 32 Derby street. She attended Walham Training School for a time, then entered the training school. The student nurses are sent to Walham Hospital for practice, under the instruction of head nurses. It was in one of these hospital periods Miss Perkins was ordered to attend Deputy Marshal Waters.

James W. Waters is twenty-two and a native of Walham. But the family had moved to Bangor, as the son did not have Miss Perkins' father's family returned to Walham that Deputy Waters might enter Walham Hospital.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—Mrs. Laura Lawren Ellis has been granted a decree of absolute divorce from Frank Ellis, one time prominent member of the Metropolitan and Cherry Chase clubs and friend of President Taft and others high in official life in Washington. No alimony required.

The name of the correspondent was suppressed by order of Justice Anderson. Mr. and Mrs. Ellis separated early in the summer of 1911. They had been frequent visitors at the White House. Mrs. Ellis is one of Mrs. Taft's most intimate friends, and the President's wife has stood staunchly by her.

The Bull Moons are getting right down to systematic campaign work in getting their nominations for State offices in shape. They're following out, too, some of the plans they condemned in the old parties. Although a postal card poll is being made with nominations to go to the favorites Russell A. March, "Stars and Stripes"	Stevens

By J. C. KERRISON

In these days when motorists are prone to regard tires as the bugbear of motor travel, it is not surprising that they are so often automobile owners come to fight with remarkable tire mileage, which would hold the opinion that careful, intelligent driving not only adds to the life of the car but keeps down the upkeep.

Mr. Baker, general manager of the Lexington company, has recently received a letter from H. R. Humphrey of No. 44 Federal street, Boston, and Charles J. Smith of 1101 Broadway, New York, who have driven their 1931 Lexington cars weighing a little over 3,000 lbs. for a little over 10,000 miles actively, without removing their tires from the day the car left the Lexington factory.

Mr. Baker says that he will be able to tribute their very great mileage to the smooth running qualities and perfect balance of the tires, and to the intelligent driving. This remarkable mileage combined with the well-known fact that the tires are made of the best quality of rubber and oil carbonates are claimed to be the "Golden Brown Lexington."

Mr. Baker.

The Alco transcontinental crew had some harrowing experiences while traveling across the great Salt Lake desert. To spite the fact that "Ferry" is equipped with instruments that would make an Arctic explorer envious, the truck was lost on the desert for three days. When last heard from the coast-to-coast truck half for Eico, Nevada, with a distance covered of 3,154 miles, and with only 800 miles to reach the Los Angeles Peninsula in California. The crew are amply supplied with food, gasoline and other equipment, and there are no fears expressed as to their safety.

Horace de Liewer, chairman of the board of directors of the Ajax-tire-making Company, sails for home tomorrow on the steamer France. His trip abroad was for the purpose of establishing Ajax tire-making connections in Europe and his mission was marked with great success.

A. H. MacIntyre, the Panhard Oil representative, is agitating reforms. "Mac" would like to have the municipal authorities canopy Boyston street. He also complains that while dining in the Back Bay he is put to great inconvenience by the fumes from the new line that accumulates on his clothes.

Charles F. Kelton, manufacturer of Invader Oil, is visiting Eddie Scheam, his New England representative. Mr. Kelton is on a trip through the New England States, looking over the various agencies.

KILLED BY TRAIN IN DOVER STREET YARD

From a close friend of the daughter of the former President comes the interesting information that the ambitions of the Longworths are in the direction of the Court of St. James. Friends of Mr. Longworth, remembering her unaccountable passion to become a conventional Queen Mary will regard her.

But if T. R. Lises, Seat in Congress Will Be Best Thing Left

NEW YORK, Aug. 30.—From a woman who claims that she occupies a position of intimate friendship to Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth there comes the story of political ambition that may lead the daughter of the former President into an interesting situation at the Court of St.

Representative Nicholas Longworth, who married Alice Roosevelt while she was a White House girl, is a candidate for the lower House of Congress from the Cincinnati district.

When the Bull Moose party cast about to see what things could be done to President Taft's (this device it was said) that Representative Longworth was counted among the poets but made up a portion of Taft's personal staff.

After the decision was reached to make a dash all along the line to the State, the Bull Moose felt safe that it be consistent a candidate would have to be run against Longworth in his district.

Big Stick Knows No Relative.
The Big Stick, which has no brother, also refused to recognize a step-brother. A candidate was duly installed in the Longworth place and played well, placed well and against the Longworth opposition. But thought that the attack in the family was rather frigid. Now comes the word of the friend of the family with this interesting explanation:
"Really, I am amazed that you do not understand the situation. The Longworths have been the apostles to go to the fore of the American court of the unambitious aristocrat. They have prepared the Court of St. James, and the only less open question is what Queen Mary, her abdication, and of what she is to be done, would think of Mrs. Longworth, who will be on the throne, and who is free from all conventional restraint."

Democrats May Ruin Plans.

"Better move herefirst," it was suggested, "what would Mrs. Longworth think of the Queen?"

It would be almost an even distribution of honors," resumed the lady, in Spanish. "But the Longworths think that if the Colonel is desired with the honor, it is important to his embassy. In that event they will not want a congressional seat on the other hand. If the Colonel moves, the Tiff demands that the Tiff should be the best they can hope to get is the place." So the lady said.

According to the information from the inner locality of the Longworth district, the Longworths felt assured that they will have some office, but which way the rat jumps.

It is pointed out that the injection of a Hull House candidate in the Longworth district may make the race result in the selection of a legislature. Consequently in that event the double-headed plans would prove aces.

ARTISTS ARRESTED BY MEDAL CONTEST

WASHINGTON, Aug. 30.—President Taft has stirred up dissension in art circles by inviting competition for the honor of designing the medal to be presented to the victors in the contest for the United States Capital Building. No responses have been received and it is said that artists resent the competition feature on the ground that it tends to encourage mediocrity.

$500 REWARD FOR THE CAPTURE OF "THE LADY WITH THE GREEN PARASOL"

At Revere Beach, Sunday, $200. At Paragon Park Nantasket, Sunday, $150. At White City Labor Day, $150.

THIS IS HOW YOU DO IT:

MISS AD TAKER, of the Boston AMERICAN, will be in the following places on Sunday next between the hours of 2 and 5 P. M.

She will stroll along the sidewalk of the prominent side of the Boulevard at Revere Beach. She will not cross the drive nor be on the beach side of the Boulevard and if anyone you cannot capture her here. You must get her on the sidewalk that starts at Convent's runs along the underground place to Revere street. However, this, she will not cross the automobile drive.

Because she will be in the "Park" and cannot be captured elsewhere.

The person who identifies Miss Ad Taker of the Boston AMERICAN must have in his or her hand, in plain sight, a copy of Sunday's Boston AMERICAN and shall say to you, "Miss Ad Taker, the green or yellow mentioned, "You are Miss Ad Taker of the Boston AMERICAN." The first person to do this will be given a reward of $150.

Miss Ad Taker at Revere Beach, photograph published on this page. She will carry a green parasol.

Because the small size of Paragon park and the ease with which she might be captured on her photograph, no picture of her is published.

She will have to find her from the person and in this description:

She is sixteen years old; weighs one hundred pounds; has blue eyes and light hair, and she carries THE GREEN PARASOL.

To secure the reward you must approach her, and say to her friends of Paragon Park, "You are Miss Ad Taker of the Boston AMERICAN."

The first man, woman or child to be identified her as directed will receive a Boston AMERICAN order for one hundred dollars in gold.

If you capture Miss Ad Taker and hold a receipt for a Boston AMERICAN want ad, as required, you get $100 extra at Revere Beach and $200 extra at Nantasket.

THIS IS Miss Ad Taker—The lady Beach has been looking for.

Miss Ad Taker, of the Boston AMERICAN, the Lady with the Green Parasol, will be in the White City, Worcester, Labor Day, from 2 to 5 P. M.

Because the small size of the park, and the ease with which she might be captured on her photograph, no picture of her is published.

You will have to find her from the parasol and this description:

She is twenty-two years old; weighs one hundred pounds; has dark eyes and dark hair, and she carries THE GREEN PARASOL. To secure the reward, you must approach her, and say to her friends of the White City, "You are Miss Ad Taker of the Boston AMERICAN."

The first man, woman or child who identifies her as directed will receive a Boston AMERICAN order for one hundred dollars in gold.

If you have in your possession a receipt for a Boston AMERICAN want ad for any day of last week or for today, you will be paid fifty dollars extra. Remember SAVE YOUR SUNDAY AMERICAN, it will be worth cash to you at the White City, Worcester, Labor Day.

WATCH FOR NEW VOTE STANDING

The new vote standing in the world series contest comes next Sunday. Candidates should remember that this will be followed by another vote list on Tuesday, November 5, and daily thereafter, if possible.

Every vote counts big now and it is important for candidates to bear in mind that there will be only two more of the big 100 million votes.

Only fifteen days more to fight for the top five spots, so you had better double up on your energy and activity during the coming week. You will have to be returning around the final twenty.

Remember: The new vote list comes next Sunday and with it the second last of the big 100-million counts.

A Preacher of Righteousness in the Tents of the Wicked

Chancellor Day of Syracuse University has rushed once more to the public defence of his benefactor, John D. Archbold and the Standard Oil. A volunteer witness, he offers himself eagerly to sustain the Archbold assertions, as he has always been ready to defend the Standard Oil and other corporations.

And who is Chancellor Day? He is a minister of the Gospel, a doctor of divinity, a preacher of righteousness, an educator and an exemplar for American youth.

With all his manifold and sacred duties and responsibilities in the worship of his Divine Master, this Apostle of the Lamb can always be relied upon to devote a little of his consecrated time and talent to the worship of the Golden Calf.

And what is the Standard Oil? It is a criminal corporation. The United States Supreme Court, in the unanimous opinion of the highest judges—the greatest, calmest tribunal in the land—states the general insistence:

That the facts establish that the assailed combination took its birth in a purpose to unlawfully acquire wealth by oppressing the public and destroying the just rights of others, and that ITS ENTIRE CAREER EXEMPLIFIES AN INEXORABLE CARRYING OUT OF SUCH WRONGFUL INTENTS, since, it is asserted, the pathway of the combination from the beginning to the time of the filing of the bill is marked with constant proofs of wrong inflicted upon the public and is strewn with the wrecks resulting from crushing out, without regard to law, the individual rights of others.

And who is John D. Archbold? He is the directing genius of this criminal corporation. He does all its dirty work in politics. He deals in Senators, and Congressmen, and editors, and judges, and sometimes brazenly tries his hand on Presidents. Incidentally he is the president of the board of trustees of Chancellor Day's university, and is generous with cheques.

Chancellor Day has always defended Archbold and the Standard Oil. His "soul aches for the rich" unceasingly. And what is this preacher of righteousness now defending in Archbold and Standard Oil? He is defending the corrupter of politics, the debaucher of elections, the would-be purchaser of the presidency of the United States.

This upon Archbold's own confession—brazen and unashamed. By his own confession and acting for his criminal corporation Archbold, having bought everything else, was trying in 1904 to buy a President! He contributed $100,000 to Roosevelt's campaign for this purpose. He thought he could buy Roosevelt. He declares that if his other Standard Oil directors had let him do what he wished to do he would have contributed $150,000 more (bid $150,000 more) for the purchase of President Roosevelt, so that he had no doubt this additional amount would have completed the trade. What Archbold had in his mind was clear.

Take it from Archbold himself, summarizing his conversation with Mr. Bliss:

Mr. Bliss was not the man to say "I told you so." The inference in the whole matter to anybody who will analyze it was very plain. The substance of it was that Mr. Bliss probably undoubtedly expressed himself that it would have been different if we had done as he wished us to do, and I myself have no doubt whatsoever on that question.

Indifference and the High Cost of Living

In Des Moines the high cost of living has been materially reduced by the installation of a public market. Similar innovations are in process of inauguration in other progressive Western cities.

Indianapolis, whose Mayor broke the trust ring of produce dealers, has gone a step further in proposing a municipal purchasing agent. It will be his duty to keep informed on supply and demand as indicated by sales in the City Market, and to maintain close touch with prices and production.

When he finds that the Food Trust has been able to raise prices through manipulation he will ship direct from producers enough to cause a break to normal figures.

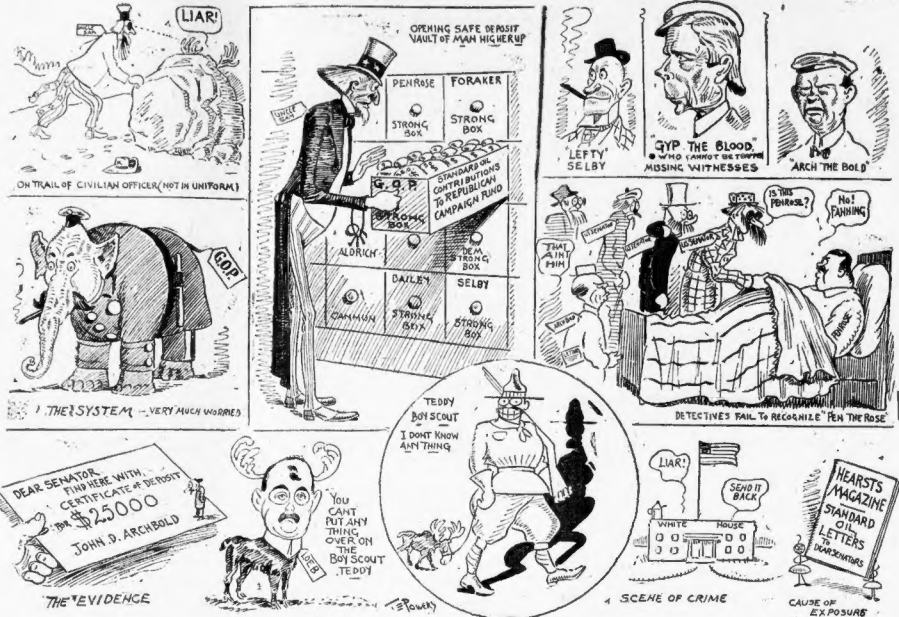

The effectiveness of such a plan is shown by the bitter fight being made on it by the produce merchants.

After a while the people of the East may awake to the realization that their own indifference is responsible for a goodly per cent. of the increased cost of food.

The Old Oaken Bucket

By JACOB J. LEIBSON

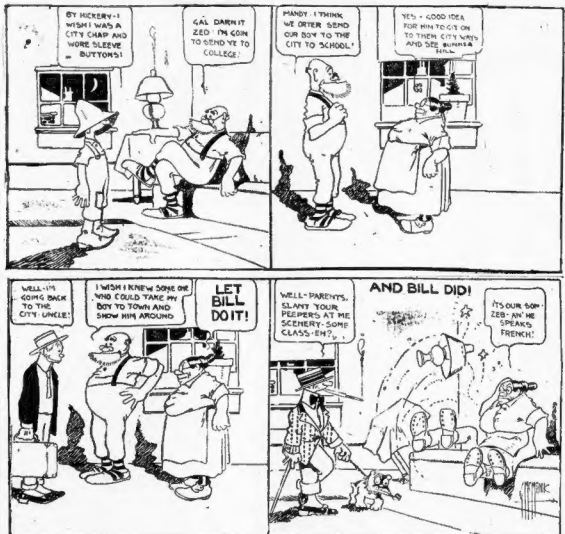

THE old oaken bucket that made a sensation by pleasing a poet still hangs in the wall. Its moss-covered sides have been sung by the nation, and all its surroundings where memories dwell. It's not quite the same as I knew in my childhood; my feelings are different while stopping to drink from those of a boy when I arrived from the wildwood. With innocent child thirst, I paused at its brink. That same oaken bucket, the moss-covered bucket, How pleasant its contents that cool in the well! It's not for the old-fashioned virtues I praise it. Or troth with delight, as its handle I take. So gently I pull at the rope as I raise it—I have to go slow or its contents would break. That tineworn old bucket is far from perfection. And yet it has pilgrims from hill and from dell; The township went "dry" in the last March election. And that's why we go to this shrine at the well. The old oaken bucket, the iron bound bucket, Now shelters the bottles that cool in the well.

It Saves a Lot of Trouble

LETTERS FROM READERS

EXPERIENCED "WATERS" ON SHIPS
Editor Boston AMERICAN:
Dear Sir:—Editorial concerning the White Star Line put me in mind. I dropped you a few lines at the time of the Titanic disaster investigation concerning the making and handling of the boats on these ships. I was surprised when the investigation was being held that no one seemed to know enough about the subject to ask the question, How many could pull as one in rough weather and knew how to handle a boat in rough weather? I would then make a bet that out of the crew (stevedores, cooks and deckmen not counted) there were not twenty men who knew their business. Ten years ago, as a few years ago, on they do not have one-half the crew or want sailors. There were about the same number of men in one watch when I was at sea as there are in both watches now. Lots of the officers have never had and any experience in that time of trouble. Almost any one can do it in the weather. When a ship is rolling about and passengers are acting like crazy people, this is the time one wants experienced men and not men. I have been there and I know what I am talking about.

THE CANAL EDITORIALS
Editor Boston AMERICAN:
Dear Sir:—Having read your several editorials on the Panama Canal Bill, I wish to take this opportunity to let you know that I, for one, heartily endorse your efforts.
Sincerely the Panama Canal, built on land owned by the United States, is as essentially American as the Cape Cod Canal. Why does Edmund kick over one and not the other, as they are both owned by Americans?
The patriotism and love of country of the American Congressmen must be at a very low ebb to pass any bill detrimental to American interests.
You cannot expect more better from a bunch of politicians that are used to fast living in Washington.
I sincerely hope that the Hearst papers and magazines will keep up the good work until they have the American people awake to the real value of the canal.

A CHAMPION OF THE PEOPLE
Editor Boston AMERICAN:
Dear Sir:—I enjoy reading the editorials in the AMERICAN, and admire it for the fact it has always made for the people, and hope it will continue to do so. It is a fight worth fighting. The people are with you. It is not every one that has the moral courage to champion the right of the people; it is more probable to carry favor with the rich and its friends.
Revolution and progress is the order of the age. The principles of the Progressive party, and even more advanced principles, will be common some day. I would like to see your newspapers make plain and clear to the people just what their principles mean, what the different parties stand for, and what the different parties offer, after the manner of the platform before the voters of the day.
With best wishes,
J. J. J.

When Son Leaves Home

By WINIFRED BLACK

S O your boy is out of school and nothing will be but he must go to the Big City and be a car-bombed.
He is clever, you say, and so far his teachers, and he really can draw such funny pictures of people that every one in town laughs over them, and he doesn't take any interest in anything on earth but pencils, paper and ideas. Must you let him go? Where? When?
Ought you to sell your home and go with him to take care of him? Is it right to let him go alone among strangers? What if he should meet Wile's girl? go take care of him if he should be hit? How is he going to know what to say to the editors when he does see them?
Dear me, what a mother you are, to be sure; what a regular mother from the very first letter of your name to the very last drop of ink at the end of your signature.
Let him go. Why, what else can you do but let him? he isn't yours, he's his own.
Yes, I know. I know you've nursed him and walked the floor with him, and you've sat up at night and taken care of him through that spell of typhoid, when the doctor said there wasn't a chance for him to pull through. You've cooked for him and nursed for him and agonized for him and hoped for him and loved for him.
Let's face it, it's nearly nineteen years ago that you heard his first feeble wail, isn't it? Nineteen years! How many parties did you stay at home from for his sake, how many dresses have you worn when you really should have had a new one, to save money for his new suit? How many times have you planned and thought and worried to help him out of some foolish, boyish scrape? He is all you have, you say; all you live for. Well, then, in the name of justice, give him his chance.
Let him learn how few people there are who will care a cent whether he is hungry or not. Let him learn that many millions there are in the world who are twice as clever as he; let him learn that the only way to get anything on earth is to work for it, and work in dead and desperate earnest.
Let him go. Let him learn to be handsome and neglected and made fun of; let him learn to fight his own way. Not just money, give him time to give him freedom, or what he thinks is freedom.
Dear Sir, he is too big and too strong and too smart to be ruled by you any longer, little mother; let him go and rule himself, and let him go with a smile and a blessing.
Ungrateful, selfish, cruel hearted? Not a bit of it; he's a boy that's never been any more to be a man if you'll let him.
Dependent upon you, he is, under it all; isn't that his own weakness, and wouldn't know how to live a unit of itself for himself? If he had all the money of Croesus?
Well, that's the weak all right when he has to, and about that wait—don't you worry. He'll get educated a few years; he'll buy the wrong thing and the wrong man; it'll be his own fault; with plenty of diffidence, after the manner of the platform before the voters of the day.
A car-bombed, say? Poor boy, he'll learn never to say that to any one, his friends. He'll learn to laugh at
